Dear Lee,

I am writing in support of the NCFE Level 1 and 2 Certificate in Food and Cookery Skills qualification.

We are a special needs school with 152 pupils currently on role. The age ranges are 4 -16 years old. I believe these qualifications are valuable for learners because [they are more accessible for our learners. The pace is slower and the groups are smaller so they would have a better chance of progression with as many qualifications as possible. This supports their progression onto further education, where they can do a Level 2 or a GCSE, depending on their abilities.

Completion of these qualifications will prepare learners to progress to further study, and enable learners to progress into employment into the hospitality and catering industry.

We are a well-known school in the area and we have many successful stories. None of the pupils leave but have no qualifications in the Food & Cooking subject. For this reason, I would like to help the pupil's progress and continue their passion for this subject for preparation for their progression. I estimate that I would register an average of 10 learners for these qualifications per year. This qualification is suitable for anyone aged pre-16 and upwards.
